MESSAGE FROM THE

Honorable Secretary

Ministry of Commerce, Government of the People's Republic of Bangladesh

I am really glad to know that Bangladesh Agro-Based Product Producers and Merchants Association (BAPMA) is going to publish their updated Members' Directory again this year with the support from the Business Promotion Council of the Ministry of Commerce, Bangladesh. With a view to promote the Agro products of the country, Ministry of Commerce has formed the Council on June 16, 2011 titled "Agro Products Business Promotion Council (APBPC)" in partnership with the public and private sector.

The government has incorporated environmental and social issues into its economic policies through developing the modern agriculture practices, and has strengthened its commitment to sustainable development. There is no alternative to achieving sustainable development for ensuring decent lives to the millions of people living in the LDCs by providing the safe agricultural products. This Membership Directory will list the information of the agro-based product producers and merchants providing the safe agro products to the nation by practicing the best standard of traditional and organic farming for sustainable development in the agricultural sectors.

I extend my sincere thanks to those whose immense contributions and untiring efforts have made possible to publish this Members' Directory.

Thank you.

MESSAGE FROM THE

Coordinator, Business Promotion Council (BPC)

Ministry of Commerce, Government of the People's Republic of Bangladesh

It gives me immense pleasure to know that the Bangladesh Agro-Based Product Producers and Merchants Association (BAPMA) is going to publish their Members' Directory again this year with the updated information of the members with the support from the Business Promotion Council under Ministry of Commerce, Bangladesh. The association BAPMA is playing a vital role in agro business sector as a member organization of the Business Promotion Council.

Agriculture is the most important sector of Bangladesh's economy. (80% of the population 66% of the labor force) is engaged in agriculture. Agro Products sub-sector is a highly potential sector for export from Bangladesh that is providing strong supports to the economy. Agriculture till now is the main occupational activity in the rural areas as most of the population depends on agriculture for their livelihood and employment. A small stimulation for export orientation will boost-up the rural economy and lead to improved quality of life.

Business Promotion Council (BPC) is the apex organization that coordinates the activities of a number of product-specific sector promotion councils. These councils are formed with a mandate for export diversification. BPC is spearheaded by Ministry of Commerce on a public-private partnership basis, as all the sector-based promotion councils are incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies as individual public limited companies. These are represented by relevant government organizations and private sector trade and industry associations having immediate stakes in the relevant sectors. BAPMA as a part of the Agro Products Business Promotion Council (APBPC) has conducted several training and development as well as research and development projects successfully for the sector with the support from BPC.

I am hopeful that the directory will play an important role in this sector and extend my sincere thanks to those whose great contributions and efforts have made possible to publish this Members' Directory. I express my sincere thanks to the BAPMA for such a time worthy publication.

Thank you.

Bangladesh Agro-Based Product Producer & Merchants Association (BAPMA)

It gives a great pleasure to introduce the member directory of Bangladesh Agro Based Product Procedure merchants Association (BAPMA) The necessity of such a publication has being strongly felt, but we cannot achieve our final vision and materialized the principal objective of our operated task due to limitation of our activities schedule so long. Now a day's world information is the most important requirement for successful formulation of planning, solution of problem and implementation of development programme. The Directory contains information of member of companies engaged in processing, manufacturing and exporting of agricultural products in respect of their contact of address, production capacity, and product range and export performance. Basically the member directory of (BAPMA) engaged in operate their own Business with integrity standard level of production procedure of Agricultural product following scientific method and technology only. When they implement their process in their respective fields will it the possible to eradicate the intoxicated class at the marketing level including upholding the interests of the marginal farmers. I do appreciate and thank all who extended their efforts and co-operation for the publication of the directory. our attempt and exercises shall be deemed successful in the directory can really do some good to these concerned with the agricultural sector.

Thank You.

MESSAGE FROM THE

Vice President

Bangladesh Agro-Based Product Producer & Merchants Association (BAPMA)

Bangladesh is one of the developing countries and at the same time Bangladesh is a densely populated area of the world. More than 2,000 people live here per square mile of land. The amount of cultivable land is less than the settlement. So we have to cultivate the same land again and again. As a result, it is necessary to apply more fertilizers, fungicides and pesticides on the soil. That is why I am becoming infertile in a very short time and at the same time the rate of water and air pollution is increasing. In this situation, it is very important for the farmer to have knowledge about the production of healthy food and preservation of the produced food by increasing the rate of food production by keeping the soil healthy. Farmers need to know how to use organic fertilizers to maintain the health of the soil, increase production and preserve the fruits/crops in any process after production.

Realizing the above issues i.e. protection of the interests of the farmers, Bangladesh Agro Based Product Producers and Merchants Association (BAPMA) took initiative to publish agricultural related issues. Our agriculture related publishing department is working relentlessly to implement this initiative. As a result, we have already taken the initiative to publish publications on organic farming, i.e. safe food farming, including potatoes and mangoes and pineapples. This will further encourage farmers to engage in organic farming in the coming days. On behalf of BAPMA, I would like to extend my sincere congratulations and best wishes to the Ministry of Commerce and the Business Promotion Council for their cooperation in the implementation of this initiative.

Thank You.

BANGLADESH AGRICULTURE

Agriculture remains the most important sector of Bangladeshi economy, contributing 19.6 percent to the national GDP and providing employment for 63 percent of the population. Agriculture in Bangladesh is heavily dependent on the weather, and the entire harvest can be wiped out in a matter of hours when cyclones hit the country. According to the World Bank, the total arable land in Bangladesh is 61.2 percent of the total land area (down from 68.3 percent in 1980). Farms are usually very small due to heavily increasing population, unwieldy land ownership, and inheritance regulations. The 3 main crops-rice, jute, and tea-have dominated agricultural exports for decades, although the rice is grown almost entirely for domestic consumption, while jute and tea are the main export earners. In addition to these products, Bangladeshi farmers produce sugarcane, tobacco, cotton, and various fruits and vegetables (sweet potatoes, bananas, pineapples, etc.) for the domestic market.

Rice is the staple food in the everyday diet of Bangladeshis. The production of rice, which can be harvested 2 or even 3 times a year, reached 19.9 million metric tons in 1998-99. The production of wheat reached about 2 million metric tons in 1998-99. Both crops play an important role in achieving self-sufficiency in food production. However, due to weather conditions the production of rice and wheat fluctuate greatly, forcing Bangladesh to import food from the international market or turn to international aid. Bangladesh imported 1.6 million tons of wheat (mainly from the United States) in 2000 in order to meet the demand in the local market.

Jute, often called the "golden fibre" of Bengal, is the main export-earner for Bangladeshi agriculture, as Bangladesh remains the world's second-largest producer of jute (after India) and the world's largest exporter of fiber. Jute is traditionally used for the fiber of carpet backing, burlap bags, cheap paper, and various other purposes. Its importance for the Bangladeshi economy comes from the fact that almost 3 million farms are involved in jute production. In 1999 Bangladeshi export earnings from jute amounted to US$55 million, with the country producing 720,000 metric tons of jute, although this is about one-third of the jute production of the middle of the 1980s. The decline in jute production is attributed to declining world prices for this crop and to farmers switching to other crops.

Bangladesh also produces tea leaves, mainly for export, although the export of this product contributes only 1 percent of the country's hard currency earnings. In 1998-99 the country produced 56,000 metric tons of tea leaves, but it could produce twice that amount. The main obstacle to increasing production is in falling prices for tea in the international market and in management and regulation problems in the industry in the country.

Tropical rainforest is important for maintaining the ecological balance in Bangladesh, and forestry contributes 1.9 percent to the GDP (1999-2000). The forest covers around 17 percent of the country's territory, or 2.5 million hectares (6.18 million acres). The timber is used by the construction industry as a source of building materials, by the printing industry as a source of materials to produce paper, and in the agricultural sector as a source of firewood. Commercial logging is limited to around 6.1 million cubic feet, and the government plans to plant more trees within the next 15 years.

Fishing is another important activity in the country, contributing 4.9 percent to the GDP (1999-2000) and providing 6 percent of the total export income. The overall fish production was around 1.6 million metric tons (1999-2000). Bangladesh mainly exports its shrimp to the international market

INTRODUCTION OF AGRO PRODUCTS BUSINESS PROMOTION COUNCIL (APBPC)

Agriculture is the most important sector of Bangladesh's economy. (80% of the population 66% of the labor force) is engaged in agriculture. Agro Products sub-sector is a highly potential sector for export from Bangladesh that is providing strong supports to the economy. Agriculture till now is the main occupational activity in the rural areas as most of the population depends on agriculture for their livelihood and employment. A small stimulation for export orientation will boost-up the rural economy and lead to improved quality of life.

Export Policy 2003-06 recognized formation of sector/product-based business promotion councils (hereinafter mentioned as 'Council') for export promotion and diversification through addressing problems related to capacities of the industry in particular. In this connection, Agro Products Business Promotion Council (APBPC) was established under Ministry of Commerce to promote the export of Agricultural and Horticultural products of Bangladesh. It is a unique initiative of private - public partnership under the Companies Act 1994. Members of the company represent trade associations and chambers, banks and relevant government ministries. It is working for the promotion of exports of Agricultural and Horticultural products through organizing different capacity building activities, help the industry acquire right technology, and address issues related to productivity, quality, finance, standard and compliance.

Bangladesh is primarily an agrarian economy. Agriculture is the single largest producing sector of economy since it comprises about 30% of the country's GDP and employing around 66% of the total labor force. The performance of this sector has an overwhelming impact on major macroeconomic objectives like employment generation, poverty alleviation, human resources development and food security.

Meeting the nation's food requirements remains the key objective of the government and in recent years there has been substantial increase in grain production. Rice, Jute, Sugarcane, Potato, Pulses, Wheat, Tea, Tobacco, Oilseed, Spices and Fruit are the principal crops. Few of the products of this sector are currently exported in different countries with immense global competition. The growth and diversification of Agro products largely depends on the policy support, public-private joint initiative for institutional and financial support, availability of technical and business information, innovation and sustainable development of technology and related products, capacity development of industries, research and development facilities and removal of other barriers relating to the agricultural sector.

In the present context of globalization, the ministry of commerce has taken initiative as part of the development and diversification strategy to increase industrial base and volume of foreign trade. The Agro sector also plays a vital role in the socio-economic development of the Bangladesh.

Aims & Objectives of the Council:

Among all the special attention is to capacity building activities in respect of improving human resources, acquiring appropriate technology, information about markets, attaining quality and standards, complying with international norms or codes of conducts, etc. Thus the prime objective of forming the Council is to promote the sector to achieve competency in the local and global context as well as to help the industry building capacities in the fields of human resources and acquiring technologies. The specific objectives of the council are:

- To promote the export of agricultural and horticultural products;
- To promote and facilitate export of Agro & Horticulture products and import of required raw materials inputs, know-how, equipment and machinery for producing export quality goods;
- To develop a quality assurance programme with a view to address the issue of traceability in collaboration with or assistance from the development partners;
- To collect, compile and disseminate useful knowledge on agricultural products, technology, market opportunities, compliance requirements, etc. so as to enhance the contribution of these to the growth and development of the national economy; '
- To develop and encourage good agricultural practices in the agro-horticultural sector;
- To facilitate easy, credit to farming of agro and horticultural product and to encourage crop zoning and other protection mechanism;
- To promote, protect and safeguard the interests of the members of the Council in the context of this MOA;
- To advocate to the government on matters related to policy and planning;
- To make the Government and other bodies aware of and be responsive to the needs of agro products industry;

- To work with the Government, semi-Government, private and international agencies with participatory approaches for the benefit of the industry;
- To co-operate with public bodies and other organizations engaged in activities and/or objectives similar to those of this Council in matters of common interest;
- To send trade missions to, or receiving such missions from foreign countries for the promotion of market abroad;
- To sponsor on its own and I or arrange through the Government and development partners, visits of delegation of members to countries to promote the interests of the Agro Products industry in the areas such as market surveys, exports, joint ventures and collaborations, engineering, consultancy, studies and any other allied matters;
- To develop sets of standard practices in collaboration in the industries and the relevant government developments with a view to meeting the requirements of the buyers;
- To frame and maintain a code of professional ethics and general standards of professional conduct and practice and promote competition and healthy trade practices amongst the stockholders of Agro industry;
- To undertake and execute any trusts which may be lawfully carried out by the Council and which may be conducive to the objectives of the Council;
- To undertake training, awareness or educational programmes in relation to the aims and objects of the Council and development of human resources;
- To carry out and sponsor research works on problems relevant to the exercise of Agro industry consistent with the aims and objectives of the Council;
- To undertake projects and to provide facilitation services to all stakeholders in planning, implementation and evaluation of development projects ;
- To adopt such means of making known the activities and services of the Council as deemed expedient and in particular by advertising in the press, digital and electronic media by circular, purchase and exhibition of works of interest, by publication of books and periodicals or any other kind of literature and by granting prizes, awards and donations;
- To institute, conduct and defend legal proceedings by or against the Council or member of the Council or employees in respect of matters affecting the Council
- To undertake and help settle disputes either between the Council members or between the members and others by arbitration or otherwise in accordance with the main objectives of the Association; and
- To undertake any other job to fulfill the aims and objectives of the Council.

AGRO-FOOD PROCESSING INDUSTRY IN BANGLADESH: AN OVERVIEW

The agro-food processing industry constitutes an important industry in the manufacturing sector in most countries. This industry is an important part of the manufacturing sector in Bangladesh which now accounts for about 20 per cent of gross domestic product (GDP) of the country. The agro-food processing industry now contributes about 8.0 per cent to manufacturing output (1.7 per cent of GDP). Despite maintaining sustained growth in output over the last decade or so, its share of GDP remains quite static below 2.0 per cent. This is indicative of the industry's failure to achieve a higher growth rate relative to other industries, in particular the RMG (ready-made garment) industry which seems to overwhelmingly dominate the manufacturing activity in Bangladesh.

According to the UN Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO), agro-processing involves the transformation of products originating from agriculture, forestry and fisheries. Agro-food processing involves primary and secondary processing. The former is associated with processing of agricultural products in their basic form and the latter requires conversion into final products like jams, biscuits etc. The primary inputs for the industry include crops, poultry and livestock, fishery and some forestry products.

This industry now employs about 2.2 per cent of total workforce in the country of which close to 70 per cent are unskilled labour. Its share of total exports now stands at around 1.5 per cent. Some researchers indicate that the country has much higher potential to explore enhancement of exports from this industry as reflected in their estimated revealed comparative advantage (RCA). Bangladesh now exports about US$400 million processed agro-food products and has the potential to rise further in the near future given the RCA.

As the Bangladesh economy continues to grow, the size of the middle-income population will continue to rise. The estimated size of the middle-income population is around 35 million. Also sustained economic growth is causing rapid urbanisation. Both sustained economic growth and urbanisation have already caused changes in dietary intake where processed food has become an important element in their consumption basket.

Furthermore, with the rise of two-income families the demand for processed packaged food is also on the rise. All these factors are now contributing to a rapidly growing domestic market for a whole range of processed food including ready-to-eat meals. But there is also now a market that exists to cater to the needs of rural population where 40 per cent of the country's people live. However, that market growth is constrained by rural poverty as most poor people are largely but not exclusively live in rural areas. For these poor people hunger remains a daily reality. The 2019 Global Hunger Index puts Bangladesh in the 88th position out of 117 countries with a score of 25.8, indicating the country suffers from a level of hunger that is considered as serious.

While a part of the manufacturing sector the agro-food processing industry remains closely integrated with the agriculture sector. In Bangladesh, 40 per cent of workforce is now in the agriculture sector. More importantly, the industry remains at the centre of all economic activities within the complex food system to ensure food supply for the population using mostly the market mechanism. Even where still subsistence farming exists, farmers there also have to interface with the market however limited that encounter might be.

The industry is rather very fragmented in terms of the products it produces. Also, due its close proximity to agriculture, the industry is fragmented in geographical space within the country. Each of the sub-industry (e.g. cereals, dairy products, edible oil, snack food etc) has its own distinct characteristics in terms of input, technological and management requirements.

However, the industry is mostly composed of small and medium firms with a limited number of large firms, numbering 500+, mirroring the global agro-food industry in its structure. The geographic fragmentation is further contributed by the lack of well-developed transport system in the country. Quite often infrastructural deficiencies deter entrepreneurs to locate production and raw material procurement centres in areas where these raw materials are abundantly produced. Thus, an element of implicit delocalisation of production facilities is quite evident and that does not currently benefits farmers in those areas.

These fragmentations stand in the way to achieving economies of scale by firms within the industry which in turn has implications for achieving price competitiveness in the domestic and the international market. While the industry helps to reduce post-harvest crop losses (estimated at 30-40 per cent), it does not help to smoothing extreme price fluctuations in the immediate post-harvest period. However, the agro-food processing industry has the capacity to transform perishable agricultural products into storable and transportable goods which benefit farmers.

The industry has been increasingly focusing on export markets. Bangladesh exported US$374 million in 2017-18 which was a 41 per cent increase from the previous year. The captains of the industry believe that the country is poised to hit US$1.0 billion in export earnings from this industry by 2020-21. Bangladesh government provides both tax holidays and cash incentives for exporting processed food. But granting of such incentives for export promotion remains very problematic from the economic efficiency point of view. In fact, such micro-level industry-specific incentives can lead to macroeconomic inefficiency by distorting efficient allocation of resources.

The main exports from this industry are composed of frozen fish, shrimp and other frozen food products, tea, spices, fruits including dry fruits and some other processed agricultural products. The major export destinations include the European Union (EU), the US, the middle East and the Gulf, but targeting ethnic food niches in those countries with strong presence of Bangladeshi and South Asian migrants and settled communities from those countries.
