	Cross-cutting issues refer to factors that intersect with various domains and impact multiple aspects of a particular issue. In the context of neurodevelopmental disabilities with an emphasis on gender equality, there are several cross-cutting issues to consider: 1. Access to healthcare: NDDP trust encouraged equal opportunities for Women and girls with neurodevelopmental disabilities in accessing appropriate healthcare through ensuring equal access to healthcare services, including diagnostic assessments, therapies, and treatments, regardless of gender. 2. Education and employment opportunities: NDDP trust has been encouraging promoting gender equality in education and employment for individuals with neurodevelopmental disabilities by encouraging inclusive education, vocational

	training, and equal employment opportunities to break down barriers and foster independence and self-sufficiency. 3.Social stigma and discrimination: NDDP trust has been addressing societal attitudes and misconceptions for both genders for reducing stigmatization and promoting acceptance that can contribute to gender equality by ensuring equal opportunities for all individuals with neurodevelopmental disabilities. 4.Support for caregivers: NDDP Trust has rightly recognized and has been addressing the caregiving burden on families and caregivers. Gender equality can be promoted by providing support services, respite care, and equitable policies that alleviate the disproportionate impact on women and girls who often assume caregiving responsibilities. 5.Research and data collection: Trust is collecting gender-disaggregated data and conducting research specifically focused on the intersection of neurodevelopmental disabilities and gender can help identify disparities, develop targeted interventions, and advocate for gender-inclusive policies and services.
